

Mary Austin: Song Of A Maverick

by Esther F. Lanigan

Nature writer, feminist, poet and novelist, Mary Austin (1868-1934) broke away from a Methodist upbringing in Illinois by moving to California. Fleeing the San Francisco gold rush, she spent her early years in the desert and small towns along the eastern slope of the Sierra Nevada. Her autobiographies, Women Writers and the American West, Earth Horizon, and Song of a Maverick, discuss her life and works, her heartbreaks and successes, and her relationships with such notable figures as Charlotte Perkins Gilman, Jack London, and the Chautauqua Movement. Protestants, Progressives, and the Culture. - Google Books Result As her autobiography, Earth Horizon, makes clear, early in her life Austin felt herself marked by a sense of being an outsider.
